This is a research project identifying the role of luck in surviving the Holocaust. Survivors within the camps and also those hiding in Europe during WWII have lived to bear witness to the atrocities committed during Hitler's reign. Many survivors attribute their survival to pure luck, and the arbitrary nature of this survival often led to intense guilt. The trauma associated with living through the Holocaust was often passed through future generations, and this project begins to identify the impact of this shared trauma. This project is the basis for an upcoming book that will delve deeper into this theory by identifying even more survivors who have shared their story.
