Preface

If you really want to be good day trader then you should not just rush in to buy and sell any stock without any analysis. This will lead to losing your money today or tomorrow. You should use research and follow strategies to help determining where and when to buy and sell your stock positions. I have included few strategies here for your help but would request you to learn these first and do paper trade before starting real trading. Make sure to paper trade at least 21 days to enable you to understand the positive and negative of your selected strategy. This book will enable you have better portfolio decisions, even if you decide not to become a day trader. I want to let you know in advance that ultimately, market is the best teacher. The more you understand the information that traders want to see, the better you'll understand what the markets are telling you.

Learn the concepts first then test them in dummy market conditions before starting real trading.
