Introduction - being a good husband is hard. There is no on ramp, no practice game, no apprenticeship for this. You go from being completely self-centered and single, to being completely self-centered and married. The goal over the next thirty days is not to give you more information. Bookstores are full of good marriage information. Our goal is for you to become a more deliberate husband, and to listen to the voice of God every day. If you are willing, He will truly change your heart, and after thirty days (or even before) you will begin to witness real transformation in your life and in your marriage. Many of you will also find you will make greater progress if you complete this challenge with another man, or a small group of men. Men naturally resist it, but accountability is a great tool for change.
